FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

MOVIN' ON 2018 CANCELLATION DUE TO SEVERE WEATHER

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa., APRIL 27 – Movin' On, Penn State University's annual music festival had to cancel the final act, Logic, due to severe weather. Penn State Emergency Management officials were notified by the National Weather Service at approximately 8:15PM that a severe thunderstorm was in the area that contained cloud to ground lightning strikes. Festival attendees were asked to immediately evacuate to their residence, cars or the IM Building.

Due to a long-standing relationship with local townships and boroughs, Movin' On has agreed to a hard curfew of 10:30PM to be respectful of local town and gown relationships. With that curfew, Logic could not perform, even after weather clearance approval. Additionally, due to the size and magnitude of Movin' On, the festival cannot change locations. Because of the cost and logistics of the show, it is not feasible to secure a backup location or a rain venue.

We would like to thank our collaborating organizations UPUA, SPA, ARHS, GPSA, and UPAC for continuously helping us build this festival every year. Despite the unfortunate circumstances, Movin' On still provided performances and activities in commemoration for the graduating seniors. We would like to thank Lenina Crowne, Mick Jenkins, Judah and the Lion, and Daya for performing and making the festival a success. We look forward to seeing you on April 26th for Movin' On 2019.
